Ugandans Seek Skilled Black Americans To Aid In Development

Uganda is in great need of skilled Black Americans to help develop that country and "fill the gap" created by the expulsion of Europeans and Asians, according to John Kironde, former Ugandan Ambassador to the United Nations.

Kironde, heading a seven-man delegation, made this plea at a recent lecture-seminar at North Peralta Community College in Oakland. The delegation has been touring the United States in its quest for doctors, paramedics, science and mathematics teachers and engineers.

Kironde said, however, that skilled personnel was needed in every possible area. The Ugandan government will pay transportation, housing and a salary to every qualified Black American.

Salaries, Kironde said, will not be comparable to those in the United States, but noted that American dollars buy more in Ugnnda. Applicants are asked to commit themselves for at least two years. They should be qualified in their fields by education or work experience.

Kironde asked that persons wishing to apply or eager for more information should write to the Ugandan Ambassador to the United Nations at 801 Second Avenue, New York, or to the Ugandan Ambassador to the United States in Washington, D.C.

Kironde told the lecture-seminar that the delegation was composed of Ugandans from the private sector rather than the government because President Idi Amin felt the recruitment of Black professionals and skilled workers should be on a "people-to-people" rather than a "country-to-country" basis.

He said, "Our major aim is to get the Ugandan economy under the control of the Ugandans.... We must demonstrate to the world that Africa is for Black people. We must show that we can do the job and do it well."

Before Kironde spelled out to the audience the economic problem and needs of Uganda, he gave a background of the country's thrust to become economically independent. He explained that after Uganda gained its political independence from Britain, the Brithis deprived Ugandans of economic independence by leaving economic power in the hands of "foreigners and outsiders." According to Amin, political power is inadequate without economic power of someone else.

Phase I of Amin's attempt to gain economic power was to expell Israelis who were military advisers and in control of construction. Asians from India were then expelled. Kironde said that Asians had been brought to Uganda 70 years ago as indentured servants and served as a buffer between Blacks and whites. Although Asians numbered 84,000 out of the total population of 11 million in Uganda, they controlled 80 percent of the economy.

Kironde added that when Uganda became independent, Amin offered Ugandan citizenship to the Asians, which most of them refused, keeping their Brithis citizenship. Consequently when Phase III British planters and businessmen were asked to leave. Western countries branded the expulsions as "racism in reverse," but Kironde said, "The foreigners who were expelled continually sabotaged Amin's economic goal."

Kironde accused the Western press of waging a campaign against Uganda, reporting what he described as "fabrications and concoctions."

Consequently Uganda is in dire need, Kironde said, of skilled personnel in every field.

'Civil Rights Went Wrong'

Author John Howard Griffin, who changed his skin color and passed for Black to write his best-selling book, "Black No More," reports little real change or progress in the plight of Black Americans in the years since his book was published and made into a movie.

Looking back in retrospect on the 1960s in a new series of magazine articles, Griffin concludes:

"The problems of daily living for the vast majority of Black men has not changed. The vast difference between what this country was saying and apparently believing, and what the Black man is experiencing is embittering."

Upholding the trend to Black separatism, Griffin in his magazine articles reviews where civil right went wrong in the 60s.

His book first appeared as a series of articles in 1960 and has since been published in 39 printings.

Communications between the races have broken down, he says.

"Whites were professing the right things, showing deep concern over injustices, expressing determination to resolve the problems of racism but never really consulting with Black people as equals," says Griffin.

He cites examples of the refusal of whites to listen to Blacks as equals and charges that "even well-disposed white men tended to be turned off and affronted if Black men told them truths that offended their prejudices."

"I, as a man now white once again, could say the things that needed saying but would be rejected if Black men said them"

The author says he was asked to speak in many cities and "my function was to say those things that the Black man knew much better than I could hope to know but could not communicate as yet, for the simple reason that white men could not tolerate hearing them from a Black man's mouth."

Griffin relates an experiment he made with Comedian Dick Gregory in which they agreed to say essentially the same things to a lecture audience at the same school.

"I got an ovation for 'talking straight.' He got uncomfortable silence for saying the same things."

Mayors Are Uptight About Cutbacks In Federal Funds

By Diane R. Williams

Washington (NBNS)--A group of mayors from the legislative action committee of the United States Conference of Mayors came to Capitol Hill last week to denounce Nixon Administration cutbacks in federal funds to their cities and to apologize to the people and Congress for passing off a "Trojan hourse" and participating in "a gigantic doublecross."

Those were some of the mayors' terms for the revenue sharing program--for which they lobbied and which Congress passed last year--proposed by Nixon as a substitute for federal funding programs in the cities.

Gary Mayor

In an emotional address before the Senate Subcommittee in Intergovernmental Relations, Mayor Richard Hatcher of Gary, Indiana, said the cutbacks would affect programs ranging from "early learning centers" for preschool children to those involving the elderly.

He said that if special revenue sharing programs proposed by the President are enacted in the fiscal year of 1974, his city would receive only 40 percent of what it got in the fiscal year 1972.

"I understand as well as anyone that the climate and conditions in this nation are such that it will be difficult to generate the moral outrage that this federal action merits," Hatcher said.

He said that "the cities are increasingly viewed as repositories for the poor, the Black, the Latin, the elderly--those who are relatively powerless against the interests of stronger and more affluent elements of our society.

"But I realize also--and I hope that the national Administration and the Congress does--that as a moral and practical matter our society cannot raise the expectations of the downtrodden in this nation and then dash those expectations. In so doing, this society would be daring an understandably desperate people. It would be inviting them to abandon what little hope they have in our system of laws. It would be taking a reckless gamble with the stability of this nation."

Seattle Mayor

"Most of us," began Wesley C. Uhlman, mayor of Seattle, "have applauded the President's idea of New Federalism and revenue sharing but it has not turned out to be the savior of the cities we thought it would be.

Plea

Citing examples of what they termed "human costs" of the cutbacks in social services, employment and housing, the mayors urged Congress to restore the funds before approving the President's proposal to combine several existing programs into a new Urban Community Development revenue sharing fund.

The mayors had lobbied diligently four years for a five-year $30 billion general revenue sharing plan, which became law last fall. A few months later, they were before Congress again, this time to chastise what Milwaukee's Henry Maier said was "a gigantic doublecross" by the Nixon Administration.

The mayors said they had been assured by Nixon that revenue sharing monies would be in addition to--not a substitute for--the special purpose funds for housing and other services their cities now receive.

"Imagine," said Moon Landrieu, mayor of New Orleans, "our shock, our dismay, our confusion and our anger when the budget was released calling for no money for Model Cities, a token amount for urban renewal and an end to numerous categorical programs."

Adding to their dismay, Landrieu and Maier said, was budget language suggesting that cutbacks in open space, library and anti-poverty programs were justifiable, because local communities can now fund such programs with revenue sharing monies if they so desire.

Detroit's Mayor Roman Gribbs said he was confronting a "literally devastating" loss of $155 million, with his budget facing a $25 to $30 million deficit.

The Republican in the group--Mayor Stanley A. Cmich, of Canton, Ohio--said the "great transformation" in federal funding which the President has proposed "will take much time--and we're running out of time."

Tells IFCO's Thrust

New York--"It is time to challenge or change our thinking about IFCO's posture and location in the world, declared Lucius Walker Jr., IFCO executive director, at the IFCO board meeting held here recently.

The board assembled to discuss IFCO's direction, life style and philosophy.

Questions put to the board included one on the possibility of IFCO moving its operations and combining its many program areas and administrative operations into one facility.

Walker posed the question:

"Does our present location reflect anything that IFCO wants or needs to be associated with? Do we want to be landlords or owners of "property"?

The board moved to devote one day to an intensive analysis of this and other questions relating to IFCO's future thrust.

The Lutheran Church in America, the United Presbyterian Church-USA and the American Baptist Churches-USA were among the denominations who reported to the board that major structural changes had occurred within their denominations.

There was general agreement that there will be less administering of funds on a national level and increasing emphasis and control will fall to the regional structures.

Phil Mason, vicepresident of Shaw University in Raleigh, North Carolina, gave a report on Shaw's University Without Walls system which has been established in New York, Rochester, Miami and Los Angeles.

Mason will explore the possibility of Shaw University accreditation for IFCO's training center, the Amilcar Babral Institute in Washington, D.C., where a future University Without Walls is planned.

The Reverend Atha Baugh, IFCO Board president and Lucius Walker Jr. will soon leave on a month's fact-finding trip to Africa.

Sepia Says Black Is Profitable

CLINT C. PORTER, Asst. Publisher

I have received several requests from our readers to return occasionally to the discussions in the metaphysical or philosophical vein. This pleases me because these subjects are "up my alley."

I have a severe fault of not knowing where to truly begin because the field is so vast. So I usually just start off as if we have been discussing for hours any given subject. I know that is not using my head, but most of the time I forget that my head is more than a knob protruding from the end of my neck, bearing the organs of sight, sound, and smell. I forget, sometime, that my head also contains the mechanism through which I can receive messages from the Overself, and transmit messages to the Overself.

T.L. Rampa says, "The head is a rather delicate contraption which suffers from the fact that all blood supplies, all nervous energies, must go through a rather narrow channel in the already narrow neck." "It follows," he continues, "that the head should be well balanced so that there is no undue constriction of the spinal cord."

That makes sense, doesn't it? (Doesn't it?) There are people who use their head to obtain poise. They balance books on top and then they walk around the room and up and down stairs. That's one way. (Try it with a bowl of ice water, or hot wax.)

I have other uses for my head. Thinking. Or transmitting thought. That takes practice and meditation. Anyone can meditate. All that is necessary is for one to concentrate until his mind is blank-until no picture is in your mind-only the Great White Light. Then slowly meditate on your favorite subject.

I believe that people should stray from the

ARMY RECRUITER

Hi everyone,

Have you been seeking training in computer programming? Well, if you have and you haven't found anything TODAY'S ARMY might just be the place for you. A great deal has been written and even more said about this being an "age of computers." Generally, what people want most to know is what this will mean to them in terms of jobs and conveniences. It seems apparent it will mean plenty of both. An electronic computer, though often referred to as a "mechanical brain", can only follow step-by-step instructions. These instructions are prpared by people called "computer programmers."

A computer not only produces mathematical calculations at fantastic speeds, but stores large amounts of data for later use. Every "problem" processed in a computer must first be carefully analyzed so that exact and logical steps for its solution can be worked out. It is the programmer who does this work. Most employers want their programmers to have as much formal education as possible. A high school diploma is mandatory. High school and post-high school instruction does not eliminate the need for on-the job training. Since technology changes constantly and each type of computer has its own special programming, additional training is usually required.

Periodically, TODAY'S ARMY is able to provide young men and women with formal instruction in computer programming. When there are openings, enlistees who qualify are sent to the U.S. Army Adjutant General School at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana.

Enlistees from the Monterey peninsula during the month of March were: Rodney E. King, 8 Arkwright Ct., Pacific Grove. Rodney enlisted for the $1500 Bonus and a 16 months minimum guarantee to Ft. Lewis, Washington. Michael J. Tryon, 148 Pacific St., Pacific Grove, enlisted for Personnel Specialist with the 11th Armored Cav. Regiment. Steve Eskue, 734 Mermaid Ave., Pacific Grove, chose CDEC at the Ft. Ord-Hunter Ligget Complex with his training in the Administrative Specialist Courts. Julio E. Olmo, 1667 Noche Buena, Seaside, received a 16 months minimum tour in Europe plus training in the Mechanical Maintenance field. James D. Vickers Jr., 917 Harcourt, Apt. C, Seaside, reenlisted for Law Enforcement at Ft. Lewis, Washington. Paul D. Sandor, also from Seaside, took advantage of the $1500 Bonus and chose Ft. Lewis, Washington, as his place of duty. George T. Cruz, 819 Hayes Circle, Ft. Ord, enlisted for Radio Relay and Carrier Attendant School. Song H. Cho, 341 Everett Dr., Marina, enlisted the 2 year Regular Army Program. George B. Furtado, 482 Larson Ct., Marina, also enlisted for the Radio Relay and Carrier Attendant Course. George was a prior service enlistee. Rodney J. San Nicolas, 455 Gloria Circle, enlisted in our Delayed Entry Program, he will report for Active Duty in June.

Pearl Ross To Speak At Meeting

Pearl Ross, nurse, author, and founder of the Monterey Chapter of NOW (National Organization of Women), will be the speaker at the third of the series of Operation Update programs tomorrow (Thursday) at the United Methodist Church in Monterey, 1 Soledad Drive. Her topic will be "The Growing Power and Vision of the Women's Crusade."

The lecture is scheduled from 10 a.m. until noon, with time for a coffee break and a question and answer period. The Update Series is sponsored annually, free of charge, by the Monterey Peninsula Branch of the American Association of University Women as a service to the community. There will be free baby sitting services under the direction of Mrs. John Mehrholz, and transportation will be provided by Mrs. David Parnie - 373-0295.

Mrs. Ross' book "Jesus the Pagan" was written to express her concept of Jesus "as a man who taught balance as the key to wisdom needed in building a saner world". The book, Mrs. Ross says, culminates 24 years of study of the gospels, and protrays Jesus as a feminist and universalist in his thinking.

The speaker is president of the local chapter of the American Humanist Association, a discussion group encouraging questioning and free thought. In 1970 she opened the local chapter of NOW and resigned two years later.

"Blance will never come through men inviting women to participate equally with them in all phases of policy making", Mrs. Ross claims, "but only through women asserting themselves". She believes that "We are on the threshold of a whole new world, and men and women who believe in balance will usher it in."

Teachers Association Endorses Cunningham, Karas For School Board

Ted Cunningham and Sam Karas, candidates for the Monterey Peninsula Unified School District Board, have been endorsed by the Monterey Bay Teachers Association, according to Sam Alley, president. The endorsement, approved by the MBTA Representative Council at its March meeting, was announced last week at a general meeting for district teachers. Sunningham and Karas attended the meeting to speak with teachers and to listen to their concerns regarding the district.

MBTA's decision to endorse the two candidates followed a thorough study of all candidates running in the April 17 election. According to Martha Norton, chairman of the association's Political Activities Committee, teachers are generally concerned with the district's implementation this year of new evaluation guidelines, with the district's plans for spending money which will be available from SB 90, and about the district's proposed building program which includes a staff development center teachers believe might be adequately housed in an existing school structure. Mrs. Norton stressed, however, that the primary desire of teachers is for Board members who will seek teachers' views as part of the regular decision-making process, and who will put classroom needs first in determining district priorities. All candidates were interviewed individually by the Political Activities Committee, and Cunningham and Karas were recommended by the committee for endorsement because of their stand on these matters. Cunningham is an incumbent member of the Board, and Karas is a candidate for the seat to be vacated by Dr. Robert Black.

Lonnie Ayers, running for re-election in MPUSD's Region 1 (the Marina area), is unopposed, and therefore MBTA took no action regarding that Board seat.

chores of daily living and devote at least one hour in personal concentration. You owe it to yourself. You owe it to your family or your loved ones.

While you are mediatating or "drawing a picture in your mind," make certain you are not simply forming an illusion. In time you will be able to differentiate between illusions and the real thing. I detest illusions.

On other planes, this particular planet is called the World of Illusions or the world where one's senses deceive one, the world where things are very different from what they seem. People on the "Other Side" think of those on the Earth as being afraid to go to Hell. Well, Lobsang says, "Earth is one of the hells, it is where we get the hell of physical experience and the hell of illusions."

We look upon this world which we call the Earth, and we think it is the most wonderful thing ever. We think the whole universe and universes beyond were made specially and exclusively for this earth. We think we are the only creatures alive in space. We think that millions and billions, and trillions and trillions of other worlds are empty, desolate, just put up there as a peep-show for mankind. We think the like of us has hever been seen before and will never be seen again.

That is illusion. Earth is a speck of dust and no more. Earth is one of the smaller specks of dirt in the sky. We think, while we are on this earth, that we are great and powerful. We think that our riches will buy the Kingdom of Heaven. Well, there is no bargain basement beyond this earth. We cannot receive salvation at cut rate. We have to rid ourselves of Illusion. We have to rid ourselves of selfishness and lust. We have to rid ourselves of our callous disregard for the other person. Until we are ready to give of ourself, we cannot receive of others. It is an illusion to think that we can.

So we shall all struggle to rid ourselves of our illusions and dwell only with real things. Let us not wait until we reach Purgatory before we start thinking and acting right. Purgatory? Well, each person probably has his beliefs or disbeliefs. To me, it is not hell. In fact it is nothing like hell. It is more like the Hall of Memories in the astral world. A place where you "clean up," so to speak, before you give Yourself (or Soul, or your Overself) to the Astral Being.

If in your attic or closet there has lain a picture frame you decided to give to a friend or relative as a gift, you would never reach and grab it and hand it to the person. You would carefully clean it up, polish it, clear up the scratches and wrap it in new paper. Then you would feel it worthy enough to give to the person.

In the same way, when a human or animal leaves this world there is a very short stay in "Purgatory" where the soul sees the mistakes committed in the life just ended, and there is no punishment, it is not like the local jail, it is not hell, and there are no devils prodding you with hot froks. Purgatory is merely a place where you shed some of your conceit, illusions, and where you face up to the fact that although on Earth you had money, and people were afraid of you, here it is quite different, you did not bring your money with you.

It is a pleasant experience, really, to rid yourself of the dirt and grime you picked up on Earth.

Why wait until Purgatory? Why fill your head with Illusions? Right now, today, tonight you can begin the Art of Concentration. Concentrate on being nice. It is nice to be nice. It is nice for people to say you are nice. But it is even nicer, when you know you are nice.

Andy says hello to everyone. He wants me to tell you that he felt your prayers. You are nice.

AMNESTY

Our great Country has been subjected to more than environmental pollution. In the very recent past, both Ft. Ord and the Presidio of Monterey were "under siege" by the Vietnam Veterans Against The War. Members of the VVAW recruited students from the most liberal oriented colleges in California -- UCSC -- to come to Ft. Ord and demonstrate. Isn't it strange and paradoxical that an extreme minority group can garner so much publicity from our news media?

What is happening currently?

During the past several weeks, Americans have rejoiced that all her Prisoners of War have finally, after many long years of internment, been returning home. "God Bless America" said one. Others have been equally as eloquent in their praise of America, the President and those individuals in our Country who have not forgotten these men.

Contrast this with word coming from New York and Washington of an organization of "Bleeding Hearts" who now want total amnesty for those who fled the Country to avoid their military obligations. "Forgive and forget" seems to be the motto of these "do-gooders". "I want to go home" is the lament of these men who, during conflict, went to Canada, Sweden and other countries, as a means of faoing an obligation to their government.

The American Legion, along with many, many other organizations and individuals, including President Nixon, have come out fighting against "total amnesty". It is their and our belief that there should never be total amnest for these individuals.

Certainly, few will argue that Vietnam was anything but a "popular war" but, we would ask you, what war has ever been "popular"? Ask any Veteran if he had a picnic in any conflict or war in which he fought and few, if any, will answer in the affirmative.

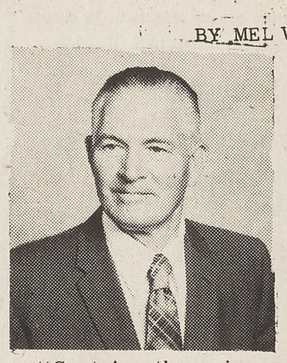
Certainly, we must recognize, whether we hold to the belief or not, that certain religious groups do have valid grounds for their beliefs concerning bearing arms. But these groups are so recognized and deferential treatment has been accorded them. But to flee, without religious scruples, is nothing but out-and-out cowardice--"yellow bellied" is an old but still appropo title for such individuals.

It is the feeling of a vast majority of the Country that total amnesty would be a travesty of justice; a great disservice to the men who did take up arms; and most certainly a hallow mockery to those who gave their lives in the Vietnam war. They, too, had reservations about the propriety of the conflict but they did not flee to avoid this service.

If these individuals do come back to America, they must face the music. Any other solution would be alien to our system of Democracy where bearing arms at the call of the government is a duty of citizenship. When that duty is avoided by fleeing the Country, then, it is our belief, they have given up their rights for citizenship.

As I See It

BY MEL VERCOE



"Captain, there is an emergency. We need you on the bridge right away. The tanker Shigetsu Maru is dead in the water with engine trouble directly ahead of us, and our steering gear has been disabled by an electrical fire."

"What's the range and what's our speed?"

"2500 yards. Our speed is 17 knots. I have already ordered the engines reversed, but it will take us 4500 yards to stop."

"Is the Shigetsu Maru loaded?"

"No, sir. If we hit her we should go right through her, but there could be a fire."

"Radio the Shigetsu Maru to be ready to abandon ship. If a collision is unavoidable, we will abandon ship a half mile before impact. And get an S.O.S. out immediately."

The foregoing did not happen. Maybe it never will, but more likely it will happen several times during the next ten or fifteen years, and when it does there would be an oil spill like the world has never seen. The mythical Shigetsu Maru and the tanker about to collide with it would be capable of carrying a half million tons of oil, about five times as much as today's largest tanker, or about 25 times the capacity of the typical World War 2 tanker.

Such a tanker faced with an emergency while fully loaded would require 4 or 5 miles in order to stop, even with the engines reversed, which would make it impossible to steer while stopping.

The Army Engineers are making a study at this time to find the best places along the Atlantic, Pacific and Gulf coasts for unloading tankers, which is not an easy job, because we simply do not have a single harbor with water deep enough to accomodate the 100 foot depth of these huge ships. It will then be necessary to either create harbors deep enough or else have the ships anchor offshore to tie into pipe lines.

I attended the meeting in Salinas on March 21, where a number of citizens registered objections to have such an anchorage at Moss Landing. The impact on the environment was the main point. A farmer pointed out the seriousness of destroying Salinas Valley agriculture with refinery pollutants. I pointed out the advantages of putting such anchorages away from tourist areas, because tourism is California's third biggest industry, also the advantages of refining the oil at its sources, rather than pollute the U.S. Much of this oil would be coming from Alaska's north slope, where neither the polar bears nor the natives have much influence in Congress.

Probably the most important factor in the long run will be the cost factor. If a pipeline from Half Moon Bay to a refinery in South San Francisco would be cheaper than a pipeline from Moss Landing to a refinery in San Jose, then I expect Half Moon Bay would be the lucky winner, regardless of any and all other considerations.

Mark Twain has often been credited with saying that, "Everyone talks about the weather, but no body does anything about it." To paraphrase Mark Twain, "Everyone talks about making education meaningful so that the non-diligent or un-involved student will be helped and motivated, but no one is doing anything about it." Fortunately for us, someone is. The Black Student Union of Seaside High School last Saturday sponsored a symposium on the non-diligent or un-involved student. The symposium was an all day affair. The morning Keynote speaker was Dr. Marie Fielder from the University of California. The many students attending came from as far away as San Mateo. Teachers and administrators participated with the students in seminar groups attempting to focus in on the real problems and suggest some solutions.

After lunch, which was included in the registration fee of $1.25, the participants assembled for the afternoon Keynote speaker. I was privileged to introduce Mr. Lloyd Haynes who plays the role of Mr. Pete Dixon, a history teacher, on the T.V. program ROOM 222. Mr. Haynes, who teaches flying, flew to the Peninsula in his own Bellanca airplane just to attend the symposium. He has a special interest in motivating kids to learn through their own experience. He said that a good teacher doesn't just teach but creates an atmosphere where his experience is shared with the students. It was certainly a great experience to meet and talk with a T.V. star who really has been motivated by his role to be of help in the all important task of educating our youth.

The result of the symposium will be the development of an "action plan." The members of the Black Student Union of Seaside High School and their advisor, Mr. Ben Turner, are to be complimented on a nexessary job well done.

Bob Wood Reports

If legislation tightening up the law on "bad check" writing is successful in the Legislature this session, we have hopes that it could save California consumers millions of dollars a year.

At present, the lack of such a law has forced merchants to take the loss for these bad checks and pass it along to the consumer in added prices for goods and services. It's the honest consumer who heretofore has been paying the bill for the cheat.

The intent of the new legislation is to establish the graudulent intent of the "bad check" writer by making the issuance of the check itself the presumptive evidence necessary to prove intent to defraud.

Unfortunately, existing law excludes the use of the "bad check" in this way and because it is difficult to prove the intent to defraud without it, the courts have tended to either be very lenient or have resolved the matter in favor of the check writer.

Under these circumstances, rather than attempt to collect through prosecution, most merchants have chosen to pass the losses to their customer. I think most of us can understand this, if a judge continually rules in favor of the "bad check" writer.

Studies indicate too, that "bad check" losses have been exceeding one billion dollars annually across the nation and in California our millions of dollars in bogus checks lead the nation. These tremendous losses have not been caused by the average person who, because of careless arithmetic or failure to deposit on time, are caught short in a checking account.

"Insufficient funds" checks, which are the most numerous are generally the result of poor personal bookkeeping (I'm sure I fall in that category) and are made good when the oversight is discovered. These kind of people are not in the same classification as the person who actually cashes a "bad check" for personal gain which results in someone elses loss.

Letters to the Editor

Editor:

Senate Bill 121 has been introduced by Senator Arlen Gregorio (D-San Mateo) which would increase the state appropriation for the arts from $250,000 to one million dollars. The funds will be administered by the CALIFORNIA ARTS COMMISSION to groups and institutions who will be required to match the state funding on a two to one, or in special cases, a one to one basis.

At a recent meeting the ASSOCIATION OF CALIFORNIA SYMPHONY ORCHESTRAS executive committee and all the ASCO officers present gave the bill an enthusiastic endorsement.

If Bill 121 is passed it will mean four times as much state aid to the arts as we have now. Presently California has allocated 1¢ per capita to the arts, as compared to 50¢ per capita in Utah and 99¢ in the state of New York.

The bill will be heard by the Senate Governmental Organization Committee on April 5. We urge you to support Senate Bill 121 by writing:

Editor: I am deeply concerned about the future of Humanity and our enviornment. Crime is an everday thing. There is too much greed, violence, wars and drugs.

Continuation of this can be the destrictruction of not only us, but of our yet unborn children. We have to think of them. If not, generation after generation will follow the course of terrorism and apathy. It's time to change this pattern. Right Now! To survive, America the beautiful and the world needs to unite towards a goal of brotherhood to man, regardless of race, religion, politics or governments. How can we achieve this? I'm not sure. Perhaps an educational program in "Concern for Humanity" can turn us back to normal. The power of God is in us if we will just meditate and act.

This venture to reach the you h of our country may someday bring - Cause for a celebration where we can once again sing, "God Bless America" with all sincerity. I pray so. And may "God help us all," in all places of worship and wherever we go.

We need to give our hearts to God and a helping hand to man.

Xoregos Dancers Appearing At Sunset Center

This Saturday, April 7, is the date set for a one-performance-only appearance of San Francisco's Xoregos Dance Company at Carmel's Sunset Center Theatre. The company gave a brief performance during last summer's Forest Theater Sunday Afternoon Series. The enthusiastic reception they received at that time has prompted the arrangement of this return engagement for a full evening performance.

The Xoregos Company is recognized for its style, its care for detail, its impressive technique, and its versatility, often adding voices and drama to its basic dance forms.

The company has appeared with Duke Ellington, the Oakland Symphony, and the Concord Summer Music Festival and has presented six San Francisco concert seasons in the past four years.

The program to be presented at Sunset Center will include "Soaring" as produced by the Denishawn Company in 1922, Charles Weidman's "Lynchtown" (1938) based on his memories of a lynching witnessed as a boy in Nebraska, "Brahms Waltzes" Weidman's personal tribut to Doris Humphrey (1956), as well as a scene from Xoregos' original setting for Oscar Wilde's "Salome," and a premier of Shela Xoregos' newest composition based on the poems of e.e. cummings.

The performance begins at 8:15 p.m. Tickets may be purchased in advance at the Senset Center Manager's office or from Julia Marlowe - Tickets, Room 8A, at Sunset Center. All seats $2.

Omega Day, part 1

If we look around us today we see evil everywhere on the increase. The United States government has, in effect, been overthrown by the military-industrial complex, which now holds totalitarian control over our people, although most can not see it happening because they can only see that their standard of living is on the increase. They do not realize, and if they do, don't car, that the rest of the world is being raped in order to continue and increase America's standard of living.

It is now an announced fact that our fuel supplies are drying up, as we have taken from the earth all fossils from which fuel comes, and when it is gone it is gone for good! Everywhere we have used up and squandered our God-given earthly resourses so that we might live in more luxury. But what will luxury mean when all of us together, rich and poor alike, freeze to death because we have no fuel!

The wealth and power of the world is in the hands of the very few, while the masses of the world starve to death because we have taken their food, freeze to death because we have taken their fuel, agonize to death because we have napalmed them to make them "Free".

Every day in America one more individual freedom is taken from us in no greatly different way than they have been in the communist countries, which we supposedly stand opposed. Ye there is little difference today between the power structure of the United States and those of Russia and Communist China. The masses are still taught what to think, and incarcerated or killed if they choose to think differently and criticize the government. George Orwell's book "1984" is coming to be reality today rather than fiction. The major power of the world today is divided between only three countries, who are making all other countries like unto themselves. These three powers are all declared enemies of each other, but are all working together to divide the world and its spoils, and must need to work together to make it happen.

Anyone who would deny that evil is on the increase is fooling himself. But this is not the only thing happening. If it were I think we all might commit suicide. Ten years ago a new movement started, a force which is constantly growing at a fantastic pace. What is happening is that good and evil are growing together, and that our near future holds in store the ultimate degree of both forces, a final showdown between good and evil, the sons of light against the sons of darkness.

The faith and prophecy of our scriptures tell us that good will ultimately conquer evil, that all men will eventually come to know God and His ways, and the Lord only will govern the races of men in a perfected world where love and peace are the ways of life, because human nature has changed. To many Christians and non-Christians, this seems like utter fantasy, for throughout history it has not been seen to come to pass. Today looks no different from any other day, men are still sinners. But the Christian is supposed to have hope that such will come to pass. Their Bible tells them that it will; and yet like the ancient Hebrews, they really don't believe God is acting and will act in those ways He said He would.

They don't believe and they don't really have faith in God and His power. And it is precisely because they don't believe it can happen, that they, themselves, do absolutely nothing to make it happen.

What such people do not realize is that it is happening, if they could but perceive it. They cannot percieve it because their vision is limited. They can only see their own little point in history (which is but an instant in the Mind of God), and are not able to see the whole process of life's (hence the spirit's) evolution. Thus, they become "realists" rather than "idealists", accepting their situation and condition, and desperately even trying to hold onto it, because that "reality", such as it is, at least gives them some sense of security. - They cannot progress beyond this point by moving boldly into the future, because the future is an unknown factor, and man has alsways feared the unknown. But he fears it only because he doesn't really believe God is guiding history and evolution. Thus, the coming perfection of the world is impeded by man's non-faith.

But even despite himself, man finds the future always coming. And it is my belief, founded on the promise of God, and the experiencial awareness of what is actually happening, that there will indeed be "a new heaven and a new earth". At the risk of being considered unrealistic, I claim that I have good reason to believe the final stage toward this goal has now started. In the week sto come I will try to give my reasons for this belief, and I will try to reveal what the future has in store for us, as much as God permits me to see it. What I will be saying may seem incredible to many, but I would aks this readership to consider these revelations, and accept or reject them through the consideration of an open mind and an honest observation of present day events and changes.

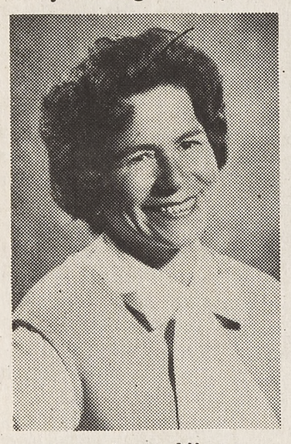
Meet Anne Nixon

I am running for the Board of Trustees of the Monterey Peninsula Community College because I feel a deep compassion for young people. My husband and I have five children; two girls in High School, a boy and a girl in college, and a boy working in Sunnyvale.



Mrs. Anne Nixon

I beleieve that our young people have been nurtured on the seeds planted by Freud, Dewey and Spock, and we are reaping the whirlwind of too much permissiveness. We need to get back to the absolutes.

In talking with young people, I find they have vert little understanding of the Free Enterprise System. We have failed to show them that the greatest opportunity for their independent achievement lies within the framework of our American way of life. There is not enough understanding of our Dudeo-Christian heritage upon which our laws are founded. It seems to me there is too much talk about our rights and not enough said about our responsibilities.

As a Board Member, I will do my best to represt you, the taxpayers, who elect the Board of Trustees to govern over your college.

Guitar Concert Planned

Mariano Cordoba, one of Spain's finest guiartists, will be presented in concert at the White Oaks Theater in Carmel Valley, Saturday, April 14, at 8 p.m.

Sr. Cordoba was featured guitartist for Madrid's famous Antonio Ballet and has toured the world with that company, one of the Sol Hurok Cultural Exchange presentations.

Mariano Corboba was born in Guadalajara, Castile, Spain. He began playing the guitar at the age of fourteen, and shortly thereafter, his family moved to Madrid where he was able to study seriously with the great masters, Rafael Nogales and Eugenio Gonzalez.

His rapid progress attracted the attention of some of the leading Flamenco singers and dancers of the day and while still in his late teens he began to accompany several the outstanding artists with whom he was associated in Spain were the singers (Cantaores) Antonio Molina and Antonio Mairena, and the dancers (Bailaores) Maria Martin, Paco Torres, Flora Albaicin, Rafael Cruz and, more recently, four years with the famous Antonio Ballet Company, better known in the U.S. as the Antonio and Rosario Company.

Although Mariano Cordoba has been in San Francisco only a short while, he is already recognized as one of the finest teachers of the present day, and a large group of enthusiastic students, under his expert guidance, are rapidly mastering the intricacies of Flamenco playing.

What do Marjorie Littletree and Kathy Phillips have in common?

A Share In Nearly A Billion Dollars.

And, they both like to dance. Marjorie portrays the legends of her people, the Tlingit Indians of Alaska, through the traditional tribal dances taught to her by her parents. She is a full-blooded Tlingit Indian, which entitles her to a share in the land claims settlement recently enacted by the Federal Government.

Across the United States in Tennessee, Kathy grooves to the sound of her favorite rock group. Kathy's mother is also a Tlingit Indian, who left her Alaskan home to live in Tennessee with her soldier-husband during World War II. That means that Kathy, who is half-Tlingit, and her mother are both eligible for a share in the claims settlement.

If you, or anyone you know, are at least one-quarter Alaskan Eskimo, Indian, or Aleut, you may be eligible to share in nearly one billion dollars, too. The cutoff date for registration is March 30, 1973, so contact the Alaskan Native Enrollment Office now. Write ALASKA NATIVE ENROLLMENT, Pouch 7-1971(A), Anchorage, Alaska, 99510.

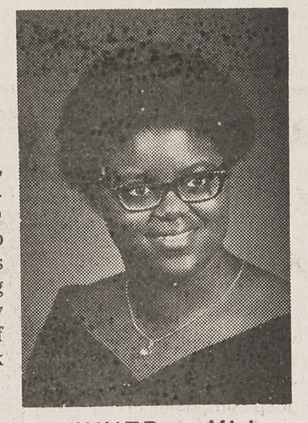
MPC Athletes Are 'Outstanding'

Six athletes at Monterey Peninsula College have been chosen to appear in this year's edition of "Outstanding College Athletes of America."

The men were chosen for leadership, service, scholarship and outstanding athletic accomplishment. Those selected were: Bill Rodriguez for swimming and water polo; James Colan, football and baseball; Jack Paquin, football; Scott Fischer, basketball and tennis; Mike Lundblad, track and cross-country; and Thomas Craft, football and baseball.

The student's compplete biographies will be presented in the annual volume. They are also candidates for the Outstanding College Athletes of America Hall of Fame in Los Angeles.



WINNER - Miriam Y. Baymon, Seaside High School senior, has been selected for National Achievement $1000 Scholarship. She has also received scholarship to University of California, Santa Cruz. Mirian is involved in many school and local activities.

Antique Show Scheduled

The May 19-20 Show features a Hall of Antiques, a Hall of Coins and Stamps, a Gem and Mineral Patio and an outdoor Garden Court of Arts and Crafts and collectibles.

Sponsors of the show, The Monterey Peninsula Antique, Coin and Stamp Show Club, are busily signing up dealers who wish to participate. Hobbiests and Collectors, Artists and Craftsmen who are interested in selling a portion or all of their treasures, may obtain selling spaces by writing to: Monterey Peninsula Antique and Collectors' Show, P.O. Box 85, Soquel, CA. 95073, or phone: (408) 722-7438.

Bill For Wives' Rights Introduced

On Monday, April 2, Senator Mervyn M. Dymally (D-Los Angeles) will re-introduce his bill to give a wife the same rights as her husband in buying and selling of community property owned by both of them, in use of joint bank accounts.

Under current state law, the husband does not need his wife's consent to sell the furniture, auto, etc., but the wife must have her husband's O.K. to do so. Even a woman who is the sole wage earner of the family has no control over the family money. She is not even entitled to an accounting unless she files for dissolution of the marriage.

PRETTY AS PICTURE - Carmelita Chapter No. 38, O.E.S., Prince Hall Rite of Adoption, recently held tea and fashion show. Models for show, which was sponsored by Julie's Dress Shop of Seaside, were (from left) Mrs. William Hill, Mrs. Willie Williams, Mrs. Martha Devan, Regina Battle, Gloria Hill and Gloria Ross. Chairman of chapter is Mrs. Lucille Eiland.

ENTER - Seaside High School Girls' Drill Team, winners of First Place in Pacific Grove's 1972 Christmas Parade and First Place in Marina's 1972 Parade, have entered 1973 Marina Parade, which will be held April 29. Already over 80 entries have been received for parade, which undoubtedly will be largest in Marina's history.

Archie Is Topic Of Meeting

A film segment from "All in the Family" will be the springboard for discussion at the April 9 meeting of the Monterey Peninsula Chapter of the National Organization for Women (NOW).

Archie Bunker looks at feminism and NOW looks at Archie Bunker at the Bethlehem Lutheran Church, 800 Cass St.
